An introductory course in college writing in which students practice the ways writing and reading serve to expand, clarify, and order experience and knowledge. Particular attention is given to analytic and persuasive writing. To complete the course successfully, students must write all assignments and must have portfolios of their best work approved by a committee of readers other than their classroom teachers.

ENG 129: Topics in English, First Year Seminar– Literature and Theories of Human Nature
Prerequisites: First-year students only. May be taken before or after ENG 101 or concurrently with permission.
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Writing Intensive
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): None
Note: Ten spaces are reserved for English majors

ENG 129:0001 (3774) Callaway

This course will serve as a basic introduction to some of the major theories of universal human identity and to the ways in which literature can be used to enhance and to question our understanding of such theories. The course will use accessible texts and films selected for their entertainment value, as well as for what they can add to our understanding of the ideas of Plato, Christianity, Sigmund Freud, Conrad Lorenz, Jean Paul Sartre, B.F. Skinner, and Karl Marx.
Satisfies the General Education Writing Intensive requirement.

Required Texts (This is a sample list only, but probable texts might include the following):
Leslie Stevenson. Ten Theories of Human Nature
Flannery O’Connor. Everything that Rises Must Converge
Jack London. The Sea Wolf
Aldous Huxley. Brave New World
Albert Camus. The Stranger
John Steinbeck. In Dubious Battle
Various short stories, poems, and films provided by the instructor.
ENG 131: The Nature of Story
Prerequisites: None
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Western Cultural Tradition and Cultural Diversity & International Perspectives
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): None

ENG 131:0001 (3776) Whelan

Explores the fundamental activity of why and how we create, tell and read/listen to stories. An exploration of the various ways storytelling enters our lives: through music, art, literature, photography, history, film and song. We'll use a technology appropriate to navigate through the many ways these arts weave their stories, from swing to blues, from country to classical, from film to novels, from painting to architecture. Using an anthology of world literature as a platform, we shall attempt to illuminate the centrality of storytelling to our culture. In addition to the reading, then, we'll view films and other visual material and listen to stories in a variety of spoken and musical forms—discussing it all as we enjoy the art of storytelling.

ENG 170: Foundations of Literary Analysis
Prerequisite: ENG 101 is strongly recommended for all sections
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): None
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): ENG 170 is a core course

ENG 222:0001 (3800) Norris
  0002 (3802) Kail
  0003 (6128) Ellis

This course, required of all English majors, focuses on helping students develop critical skills particularly suited to the interpretation and analysis of poetry. It is intended to prepare students to read and write about poems with intelligence and finesse. Readings will include poems from different eras in both traditional and innovative forms, and may cover a range of poetic practices and a variety of media: including, for example, poetry readings, little magazines and presses, digital texts, and poetic movements. By the end of this course students will be able to identify a variety of poetic devices, forms, tropes, and movements. They will also have read and/or listened to some of the most admired poems in the English language, know their authors, eras, and importance in the history of poetry. Evaluation will be based on quizzes, papers, and participation.

ENG 229: Topics in Literature – Dark Humor in American Fiction
Prerequisite: 3 hours of English
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): None
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): 200-level literature course

ENG 229:0001 (6146) Kress

This class will explore fictional works that are both funny and disturbing, texts that make us laugh and then make us wonder what is so funny. Sometimes written for social critique, other times in order to explore rarely traipsed aspects of the human psyche, and others still just for a lot of fun, these works are challenging and provocative: in other words, they produce thought via laughter.

ENG 229: Topics in Literature – The Beats
Prerequisite: 3 hours of English
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): None
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): 200-level literature course

ENG 229:0002 (14362) Crouch

The Writers of the Beat Generation (1940s-1960s) were one of the most influential literary movements of the 20th Century. Rebellious, non-conformist, street wise, and passionate, these authors helped to change the course of American fiction and poetry, and their influence can still be felt strongly today. This class will examine selected texts from the major Beat authors—Kerouac, Ginsberg, Ferlinghetti, Burroughs, Snyder, and others—to see where these writers came from and how their legacy is still alive in such artists as Bob Dylan, Tom Waits, and others.
ENG 229: Topics in Literature – Scandalous Women
Prerequisite: 3 hours of English

Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Cultural Diversity and International Perspectives
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): 200-level literature course
ENG 237:0860 (14360) Bishop

The process of moving from innocence to experience has many faces in America, as our literature in the last few decades has begun to chronicle. Explores stories of coming of age in American fiction, nonfiction and film of the last fifty years from writers to many traditions, including Franco-American, Latino-Latina, Native American, African-American and Asian-American.

ENG 244: Writers of Maine
Prerequisite: 3 hours of English
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Western Cultural Tradition, Artistic & Creative Expression and Ethics
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): 200-level literature course

ENG 244:0001 (3806) Irvine, M.
0665 (1406) Phippen Hutchinson Center*

*The Frederick Hutchinson Center is located in Belfast, Maine

Living in Maine has been compared to living in a corner, or living on the edge, or living on an island. If any of these descriptions is valid, our geography must have affected our writers and our literature. Accordingly, in this course we'll read essays, novels, short stories and poetry in which the setting figures predominantly; we'll try to determine in what ways that setting has left its mark. Students will also, I hope, gain a greater appreciation of our state's rich literary heritage. Finally, we'll take a look at the recent controversy in Maine fiction: what is the REAL Maine, and who's writing about it?

ENG 245: American Short Fiction
Prerequisites: 3 hours of English
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Ethics, Western Cultural Tradition and Artistic & Creative Expression
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): 200-level literature course

ENG 245:0001 (7762) Rogers
0990 (2408) Callaway WEB

Callaway: This course studies the development in American Literature of a distinct art form known as "the short story." Longer and more prosaic than poetry, but shorter and more "poetic" than most novels, the short story has evolved into one of the more powerful mediums American writers have available to them for the expression of their particular artistic visions. Though the short story is a world wide phenomenon, this course will look at the history of the short story's evolution in America and will help the student better understand how to read, interpret, and enjoy the short story as an artistic medium.

Rogers: A study of American short fiction from Irving to the present. We will proceed chronologically, concentrating on those formal developments that have made the short story a particularly American genre. Evaluation will be based on short papers and exercises, quizzes, midterm, and final.

Required Texts for Rogers' section (subject to change):
American Short Stories (8th edition). Virginia Kouidis and Bert Hitchcock, eds.

ENG 251: English Literature Survey – Beginnings to Neoclass
Prerequisites: 3 hours of literature or permission of the instructor. (ENG 170 recommended.)

Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): 200-level literature course; pre-1800 literature course; British literature course

ENG 253:0001 (7764) Irvine, A.

A study of ten to twelve plays, selected to represent the range of Shakespeare’s achievement as a playwright. Recommended for non-majors.

ENG 271: The Act of Interpretation (Evans, S)
Prerequisite: ENG 170
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Western Cultural Tradition and Writing Intensive
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): ENG 271 is a core course
Note: Eleven spaces in each section are reserved for English majors and minors.

ENG 271:0001 (3810) Evans
   0002 (3812) Billitteri

Billitteri: An introduction to critical theory. Study of individual critics or schools of literary theory. Application of these interpretative strategies to literary texts.

Evans: In this particular section of the class, we will read, discuss, and write about a variety of consequential texts from the history of literary hermeneutics, poetics, and cultural studies, starting with Plato and Aristotle and extending to our own day. The central questions we will explore are: What is language? What makes an interpretation valid? Who is authorized to speak? What is ideology and how does it work to confer identity on subjects? In addition to our work with the printed word, we will occasionally apply hermeneutical principles to the analysis of pop songs selected by students in the class.

Required Texts (subject to change):
Recommended Texts: It is assumed that students in this class have access to the most recent edition of the MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers, edited by Joseph Gibaldi.

Students can expect to read approximately one hundred pages per class meeting (and sometimes more). Students will do a range of writing, including class and reading notes, text “mark-ups,” position papers, and formal essays. Performance on a cumulative final exam also contributes to the semester grade.
ENG 280: Introduction to Film

Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Writing Intensive
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): May count towards the Technical/Professional Writing concentration; please check with your advisor

ENG 416:0001 (7774) Diaz

This course focuses on print and online editing, including the use of traditional proofreading marks and online techniques, document layout and design, principles of copywriting, and the study of style manuals. The course follows two lines of study: one of editing/text crunching practices and one of print document design principles and practices related to the editing of documents. The cornerstone of the course is producing a newsletter for a client.

The goals of this course include the following:
- Writing and editing, and copyediting stories using a journalistic style
- Identifying parts of speech
- Understanding and responding well to issues of grammar and usage
- Providing tactful feedback
- Identifying good examples of page design
- Using InDesign to create effective layouts and page designs
ENG 429: Topics in Literature—Poetics of Translation
Prerequisites: 6 hours of literature or permission of the instructor
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): None
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): 400-level literature course

ENG 429:0001 (3838) Brinkley

The course will explore the poetics of translation both in theory and in practice. I will offer what I have learned to do as a translator of modern and contemporary Russian, German and French poetry. How does a poem in one language "write" a poem in another? How does a poet in one language mentor a poet in another? Each student will be asked to find a poet in a language (more or less known to them) in a language other than English. They will then be asked through the course of the semester to create a small anthology of that poet's works. At the same time students will explore theories of translation that are implicit in the writing of authors like Benjamin, Bakhtin, Derrida, De Man, and Irigaray.

Required Texts (subject to change):
Tsvetaeva, "An Attempt at a Room"
Tsvetaeva, Pasternak, Rilke, Letters
Pasternak, "My Sister—Life"
Rilke, Duino Elegies
Mandelstam, Selected Lyrics and "Conversation about Dante"
Celan, Selected Lyrics and translations of Mandelstam
Baudelaire, Selected Lyrics
Rimbaud, Selected Lyrics
Valery, Selected Lyrics
Benjamin, “Task of the Translator”
“Language as Such and the Language of Man”
Derrida, “Towers of Babel”
DeMan, “Conclusions: Walter Benjamin’s ‘Task of the Translator”
Irigaray, “The Fecundity of the Caress”
Bakhtin, Dostoevsky’s Poetics (Selections)
Dialogic Imagination (Selections)

Poets to be selected by participants in the course

Beginning with the third week, students will begin presenting their own translations to the class. They will also be expected to write short weekly papers and meet with me for weekly tutorials.

ENG 429: Topics in Literature—Writing as Design
Prerequisites: 6 hours of literature or permission of the instructor.
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): None
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): 400-level literature course

ENG 429:0002 (15348) Dryer

The communicative technologies that have enabled the postindustrial globalized workplace have also transformed the field of writing studies. Contemporary scholars are arguing for flexible understandings of texts as "designs"—(re)configurations of data, words, and images that produce and reflect reconfigured reading and writing practices. To this end, we will be reading and writing about recent scholarship in composition theory and professional/technical writing studies, and then turning those theoretical perspectives and research methodologies toward original field-research to help answer questions about our production and consumption of redesigned texts. Specifically, those interested in education will encounter new work in ‘multiliteracies’; those interested in new media will have the chance to theorize ‘multi-modal compositions’; those interested in workplace communications will be equipped to work with textual/activity systems; and everyone will have a chance to see what's at stake in the proliferation of ‘global englishes.’

ENG 453:0001 (14366) Brucher

We'll read 14 or so plays by Shakespeare, exemplifying the various periods of his career and modes in which he worked—comedy, tragedy, history, and romance. Class discussions will try to illuminate the expressive range of Shakespeare's language, the significance of the dramatic forms he used, and the social, political, and intellectual structures that shaped his work. We'll pay some attention to performance issues.

This version of 453 will emphasize several Roman plays, including Julius Caesar and Antony & Cleopatra, several "problem" plays, including Hamlet, Measure for Measure, and All's Well That Ends Well. Other texts will likely include The Taming of the Shrew, As You Like It, Richard the Third, Macbeth, Othello, King Lear, and The Winter's Tale.

ENG 459: Contemporary British Literature
Prerequisites: 6 hours of literature or permission of the instructor

ENG 496:0001 (7080)

ENG 496 is an experiential learning course in which students receive academic credits for doing workplace communication tasks. A student chooses his/her placement in consultation with the instructor and with the approval of the sponsor. Most students enroll for 3 credits. However, students should note that ENG 496 can be repeated for up to 6 credits, and variable amounts of credit can be arranged.

To earn 3 credits, students are required to spend 12 hours per week at their sponsored placements. In addition, they write a weekly journal, assemble materials for a portfolio/writing sample, attend technology workshops and seminars, meet with the coordinator when required, and write a final report.

ENG 499: Capstone Experience in English (Jacobs)
Prerequisites: Senior English major and permission of the department. Satisfies the general education Capstone Experience requirement. Pass/Fail grade only

ENG 499:0001 (3844)

The senior capstone requirement applies to all students in all concentrations. Any one of the following courses or experiences may be used:

- ENG 395 and one semester of tutoring in the Writing Center.
- 400 level literature course in which a student writes a seminar-level research paper.
• ENG 405, ENG 407 or ENG 408 and the approval of a finished manuscript.
• ENG 496 (at least 3 credit hours of field experience).
• Approval of an Honors thesis with a topic in an area of English studies.

Students using ENG 395, a 400 level literature course, ENG 405, 407 or 408 or an Honors thesis as a Senior Capstone Requirement must also register for the zero (0) credit hour ENG 499. This is an accounting mechanism for Student Records to track the completion of the Senior Capstone Requirement.

ENG 508: Graduate Workshop in Poetry
Prerequisites: Writing sample and permission of the instructor

ENG 508:0001 (6448) Moxley

A graduate poetry workshop for M. A. students concentrating in creative writing.

ENG 529: Advanced Report and Proposal Writing (Diaz)
Prerequisites: Graduate standing in English or permission of the instructor

ENG 529:0001 (7768)

This course prepares students to write workplace proposals and reports. Students will spend approximately four weeks analyzing proposals—including grant proposals—and reports. Students will spend the next eight weeks researching and writing a grant proposal, a project proposal, or an analytical report.

When possible, students will work on projects for campus clients. The last three weeks of the semester will focus on exploring visual and audio reports, including designing electronic materials that support oral presentations and preparing audio reports using podcast technology. This course will be taught as a workshop with student writers sharing drafts, providing peer feedback, and working as collaborators.

We will do short analyses of reports and a larger project that focuses on writing a report or a grant for a client. The goal is for each participant to have a significant writing portfolio sample by the end of the semester.

ENG 549:0001 (6142) Friedlander

And Mournful grew my heart for thee,
Thou in whose woman's mind
The ray that brightens earth and sea,
The light of song was shrined.
--Felicia Hemans, "The Grave of a Poetess"

The word "poetess" fell out of common usage in the twentieth century, but survives as a period-specific term for women writers before 1900—and as a term of disparagement for popular women writers who flourished even after that date. In recent decades, several attempts have been made to recuperate the term, either to name a poetic tradition or to identify a category of poetics. Focusing on the eighteenth century and after, some scholars have seen the "poetess tradition" as an expression of sentimental culture, which they define as distinct from the romanticism and modernism that came to displace it. Others see sentimentality as a counterforce within romanticism and modernism, and the poetess as one of its representative figures. The poetess is also, of course, a gendered category (or more precisely, a particular way of gendering the category "poet"), and this is not a contingent fact: the abjection of the figure and its continued power to embarrass and even subvert literary and critical projects is due to that gendering, as feminist scholarship has again and again shown in its recuperations of particular writers.

In this seminar, we will try to historicize the role of the poetess, looking closely at some of the social and literary practices it supported. Guided by scholarly and theoretical texts related to poetry, poetics, sentimental culture, liberal democracy, and the social construction of gender, we will consider a series of case studies both European and American. Texts and assignments still to be decided.

ENG 555: Literature of Enlightenment
Prerequisites: Graduate standing in English or permission of instructor

ENG 555:0001 (14375) Rogers

From reason to violence, from innocence to rape, from sentiment to sadism, astounding change ignited the Restoration and eighteenth century, making this period a watershed that marks the transition from Renaissance to Modern. This seminar will consider literature against the background of this historical change, inheritance, and influence. Works by Pope, Behn, Cavendish, Finch, Congreve, Dryden, Swift, Defoe, Richardson, Johnson, and Radcliffe, among others. Both clarifying and complicating our understanding of the reflexive relationship between literature and politics, we will study literature in terms of gender, culture, genre, individualism, representation, and postcolonialism.

Required texts (subject to change):
Price, The Restoration and the Eighteenth Century
Behn, Oroonoko (or Equiano, The Interesting Narrative)
Pope, Rape of the Lock
Swift, Gulliver's Travels
Defoe, Moll Flanders
Richardson, Clarissa
Radcliffe, The Italian (or Udolpho)

Evaluation: Papers, book review, presentations, research paper

ENG 556: English Romanticism
Prerequisites: Graduate standing in English or permission of the instructor

ENG 556:0001 (14376)

Studies in Romanticism with emphasis on the legacy of English Romantic poetry and prose in post-romantic literature. We will consider, for example, how Wordsworth’s originality influenced such writers as De Quincy, Baudelaire, Proust, and Walter Benjamin. Or, to trace a different tradition, Whitman and Wallace Stevens. Or, still another tradition, Woolf and Lawrence.

ENG 606: Rhetorical Theory
Prerequisites: Permission of the instructor

ENG 606:0001 (14377)

Survey of basic issues in and the contributions of major theorists, historical and contemporary.

ENG 693: Teaching College Composition
Prerequisites: Graduate standing in English and appointment as a teaching assistant in the Department of English

ENG 693:0001 (3846)

A seminar in the theory and practice of teaching ENG 101, College Composition. Seminar participants actively review their understanding of the conventions and contexts of academic writing, practice and critique ways of responding to student writing and of planning sequences of writing assignments, and begin to read in the discipline of composition studies. They pay particular attention to current scholarship on processes of writing, on reading and writing as functions of academic discourse communities, and on the institutional setting of writing instruction. Throughout the semester, they keep teaching journals, plan assignments sequences with theoretical justifications and present these to their peers, compile annotated bibliographies on topics of interest, and write position papers on selected aspects of their teaching.
