Course Descriptions

“As in a glass the sun, not otherwise
Within them was the twofold monster shining,
Now with the one, now with the other nature.” XXXI

Longfellow’s translation of Dante’s Purgatorio

Fall 2019
This course provides intense practice with habits of reading, writing, thinking, and revising essential to postsecondary academic work. Designed for students who want to create a strong foundation for themselves in academic reading and writing. Available only during fall semester. Students who complete ENG 100 move on to ENG 106 during the spring semester. Students will not earn credit or grades for completing both ENG 101 and either course in the College Composition Stretch Sequence, ENG 100 and ENG 106.

Students must complete both ENG 100 and ENG 106 with a minimum grade of C or better in each course to satisfy the General Education College Composition requirement. Neither course taken alone will satisfy this requirement.

ENG 101: College Composition
Prerequisites: All beginning college writers sign up for ENG 101
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): ENG 101 is mandatory for all students
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): None
Course description: Students practice the ways in which writing serves to expand, clarify, and order experience and knowledge, with particular attention to persuasive writing. Satisfactory completion of the course depends upon quality of weekly writing assignments as well as demonstration of proficiency in college-level writing.
The Multiliteracy Writing Center: Traditionally the Writing Center provides one-on-one tutor support for any writing and reading assignment. We still provide that support and beginning in the 2016 spring semester we will support multimodal projects. This means we can help with document and website design such as incorporating images and/or sounds, posters, flyers, publishing iBooks, and we’ll also support PowerPoint presentations and have podiums and resources to support public speaking assignments. Please view our schedule to see the new Writing Workshop programs we provide, and please consider using the Multiliteracy Writing Center as a comfortable place to read, compose, and design projects.

If you're interested in learning more about what the Multiliteracy Writing Center supports, or in having a representative from the center visit your class, please contact our Writing Center Director Paige Mitchell via email: paige.mitchell@.maine.edu

The Translingual Sections of ENG 101: Half the seats are reserved for multilingual students; half are reserved for other students who have a personal or professional interest in language difference (journalism, international business or engineering, social work, education, etc.). The logic of the section is twofold: first, we assume that putatively monolingual native speakers of English and multilingual speakers of English have much to learn from each other; second, the rapidly globalizing workplace needs people who can negotiate productively across multiple languages.

Please confirm that your students are specifically interested in enrolling in the Translingual Section due to the explanations above; please have them submit a brief description of their interests to our Writing Center Director Paige Mitchell via email: paige.mitchell@.maine.edu

This section is located in Belfast at the Hutchinson Center – FHC.

ENG 131:0001 (87507): The Nature of Story (Sarah Harlan-Haughey)
NV100 – 2:00 – 3:15 p.m. – TTh

* 5 seats in all “live” sections reserved for English majors & minors, and creative-writing minors

Course Description: Offers students experience in writing in three major forms: autobiographical narrative, fiction, and poetry.

ENG 206:0001 (86406): Descriptive and Narrative Writing (Staff)
NV406 – 12:30 p.m. - TTh
Prerequisites: ENG 101 or equivalent.
Satisfies the general education Artistic & Creative Expression and Writing Intensive requirements.
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): May count towards the Creative Writing concentration; please refer to the English major checklist and consult with your advisor.

Course description: This course in descriptive and narrative writing will help students learn how to effectively capture personal experience in narrative form. Using memoirs, as well as short stories, drama, journalism, and critical theory, students will closely analyze characters, motivation, conflict, setting, and dialogue. Students will examine the ways in which writers craft their narratives to depict their personal ‘truth’ while creating appeal and suspense for their reading audience. Weekly classes will focus on discussing the texts we read as well as having students compose personal narrative works of their own. Special emphasis on the informal, autobiographical essay.
ENG 222: Reading Poems

Course description: Focuses on helping students develop critical skills particularly suited to the interpretation and analysis of poetry. Readings will include poems from different eras in both traditional and innovative forms. May cover a range of poetic practices and a variety of media: including, for example, poetry readings, little magazines and presses, digital texts, and poetic movements.

ENG 229:0990(87566): Topics in Literature: Monster Literature (Alan Marks) WEB
Prerequisite: 3 credit hours of English

Course description: The idea of the monster in literature has been one that has been around since some of the earliest literature. How that figure is dealt with (and what meanings it might have) has changed greatly over time, however. What meanings does the literary monster hold? What purposes do they serve in their stories? In the end, what does it even mean to be “monstrous?”

This course will try to answer these questions by exploring the subject from some of the earlier, more “traditional” representations such as Dracula and Frankenstein, up through more modern interpretations of the literary monster. In the end we may be left with more questions than answers as we start to question exactly who and what “is” the monster in some of these stories.

The reading list for the course has not yet been set but may include some of the following:
Posted online
Crane’s The Monster
Assorted critical essays
Broadview Press editions
Stoker’s Dracula
Shelley’s Frankenstein (1812 edition)
Stevenson’s The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde
Beowulf
Any available edition
Gardner’s Grendel
Dunn’s Geek Love
Films
The Elephant Man

Prerequisite: 3 hours of English, or permission of instructor.
Satisfies the general education: Western Cultural Tradition, Artistic and Creative Expression and Ethics

Course description: In this course, we will be exploring Maine identity, that is, what it means to be a “Mainer” both to us and to the various writers we read. What makes life in Maine different from like elsewhere? How do these writers represent this unique identity and place? We will watch films and read novels, short stories, essays, and creative nonfiction to focus on a variety of perspectives, such as the Native Americans of Maine, the people who were born and raised in Maine, the “transplants,” the outsiders’ perspectives on the native Mainers, and the many ethnic voices of Maine. We will also be discussing various myths and (mis)representations of life in Maine as well as universal themes that arise from the poetry and prose we read, such as the important role of humor in our lives, coming of age, the role of nature in our lives, the significance of death, etc. Assignments include (but are not limited to) several short response papers, a creative project, and a student’s choice final project. We will be reading great writers such as Stephen King, Sarah Orne Jewett, E.B. White, Ruth Moore, Carolyn Chute, Sanford Phippen, and more.

ENG 336:0001 (86410) Canadian Literature (Staff)

DU115–12:30-1:45 p.m. - TTh

Prerequisites: 6 credits beyond ENG 101 (ENG 170 and ENG 222 recommended) or instructor permission

General Education Requirements: Ethics and Writing Intensive

Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): 300-400 level literature course

Course description: An intensive study of a major Canadian writer or small group of Canadian writers, or an examination of a major theme in Canadian literature. Specific topic varies from semester to semester. This reading-intensive course is designed to teach students about Canadian literature while giving them the opportunity to practice their reading and research skills in order to better prepare them for work in advanced seminars.
ENG 353:0001 (89391) Shakespeare & English Renaissance (Caroline Bicks)
NV208 – 12:30-1:45 p.m. – TTh
Prerequisite: 6 credits beyond ENG 101 (ENG 170 and ENG 222 recommended) or instructor permission
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Western Cultural Tradition
Satisfies the following English Major requirement(s): Pre-1800, British Literature and 300-400 level literature course

Course description: In this lecture/discussion course, we’ll be exploring Shakespeare’s plays and the English culture within which they were written and performed. You do not need to have read Shakespeare before; however, this discussion-intensive format of the class and the regular writing assignments are designed for students who have had previous experience taking literature courses. There is also a six-week group performance project that requires your willingness to work with others toward a common goal.

ENG 355:0001 (89390): Restoration and Eighteenth-Century British Literature (Deborah Rogers)
NV108 – 9:30-10:45 a.m. – TTh
Prerequisites: 6 credits beyond ENG 101 (ENG 170 and ENG 222 recommended) or instructor permission
General Education Requirements: Western Cultural Tradition
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): Pre-1800, British Literature, 300-400 level literature course

Course description: From sentiment to sadism, astounding change ignited the Restoration and Eighteenth Century, making this period a watershed that marks the transition from Renaissance to Modern. This reading-intensive class will consider literature against the background of this historical change, inheritance, and influence. Works by Pope, Behn, Cavendish, Finch, Congreve, Dryden, Swift, Defoe, Richardson, Johnson, and Radcliffe, among others. The focus on reading and research skills will prepare students for work in advance seminars.

ENG 381:0001 (89399) Themes in Literature: Outlaws (Sarah Harlan-Haughey)
R206 – 11:00 a.m. - 12:15 p.m. – TTh
Prerequisites: 6 credits beyond ENG 101 (ENG 170 and ENG 222 recommended) or instructor permission
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Western Cultural Tradition
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): Pre-1800, British Literature, 300-400 level literature course

Course description: Love the swashbuckling stories of Robin Hood and his merry men? You’re not alone; this story has entertained and fascinated people for over seven centuries. This class offers an in-depth study of the evolution of the outlaw, a pop culture icon. We will read the earliest medieval outlaw tales from Old Norse and Middle English sources, as well as explore the later development of outlaws in the early modern and modern periods. We will interrogate this literature’s nostalgia for a lost age, its politics of resistance, and its homosociality. You will learn about the performative and social contexts of early outlaw material, and come away from a class with richer sense of the historical and environmental factors that helped shape the important myth of the outlaw.
ENG 382:0001 (89397): Major Genres Historical Period (Staff)
SL201 – 9:00 – 9:50 a.m. – MWF
Prerequisites: 6 credits beyond ENG 101 (ENG 170 and ENG 222 recommended) or instructor permission
General Education Requirements: Western Cultural Tradition
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): 300-400 level literature course

Course description: Tragedy, comedy, lyric, novel, play or film: these are just a few of the divisions, called "genres" that we use to distinguish one kind of literary art from another. Continuing and deepening the work begun in 170 and/or 222, Major Genres in Historical Perspectives is a reading-intensive course on the thematic and technical developments of one specific genre within a broader cultural and historical framework. This theoretical approach to genre studies will allow students to spend more time reading in a genre they love, while giving them the opportunity to practice their research skills in preparation for work in advanced seminars. May be taken more than once for credit, provided the genre covered is different.

ENG 395:0001 (86401): English Internship (Paige Mitchell)
BW131 – 2:00-3:15 p.m. – TTh
Prerequisites: ENG 101 or equivalent and at least one other writing intensive course, a recommendation from a UM faculty member, submission of writing sample and permission.
General Education Requirements: Satisfies the General Education Writing Intensive Requirement.

Course description: An advanced course in writing and collaborative learning. Students first experience collaborative work in essay writing, critical reading of peers’ essays, and rigorous practice in written and oral criticism. They participate in supervised tutoring in the English Department’s writing center.

Prerequisites: 6 hours of 300-level literature courses or instructor permission
General Education Requirements: General Education Ethics and Writing Intensive
Satisfies the following English major requirements: 400-level literature

Course Description: “Close” reading remains central to mainstream literary scholarship: a scholar brings their well-informed subjectivity to bear on a text or collection of texts, scrutinizing short passages held to be representative of a larger theme, a salient moment, a significant question of representation, and so on. It of course goes without saying that English Studies has and will continue to learn much from close-reading; this method has always begged certain questions that it cannot answer on its own: how sure can we be that the excerpts chosen for analysis are in fact representative of a larger pattern? What means do we have to ensure that our claims about an author’s “style” are more than just our intuitions?

We will start by considering the theoretical underpinnings of corpus analytics, which Michael Stubbs has likened to the impact of the radio telescope on astronomy; that is, by enabling us to examine millions of words simultaneously, corpus tools make visible “patterns which lie outside unaided human perception and which no amount of introspection or manual analysis could discover” (2007: 131). In the middle part of the term, we will adopt a light corpus-analytic freeware toolkit known as “Antconc” and gain facility with it through a series of exercises that will build our new interpretative abilities of the results it produces. We will make use of the Gutenberg Project’s extensive collection of literature in .txt format to test for ourselves some conclusions about these works derived from close-reading alone.

Finally, through a small independent project, we will work our way back to some version of close-reading that honors Charles Bernstein’s dictum “Distant reading without reading is not reading. Close reading without toggling frames is myopia.”

ENG 471:0001 (87326) Sex, Gender, and the Body in Early Modern England (Caroline Bicks)
NV406 – 11:00 a.m. - 12:15 p.m. – TTh
Prerequisites: ENG 271 and 3 credit hours of literature at the 300 or 400 level, or instructor permission.
General Education Requirements: Writing Intensive

Course description: The English early modern period (roughly the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, a time also known as the English Renaissance) witnessed a literary explosion. It was also a time when definitions of masculinity and femininity were especially fluid and up for debate. Authors like Christopher Marlowe, William Shakespeare, and Margaret Cavendish were writing their poetry and plays while medical writers, religious leaders, politicians, and everyday people were actively debating what “made” someone a man or a woman and how this should guide one’s behavior in the world. We will be reading a variety of these literary and non-literary texts so that we can investigate how these multiple theories of gender, sexual difference, and sexual attraction informed the complex literary representations of masculinity and femininity created by early modern writers.

Literary texts may include:
ENG 490:0001 (26971) Research Seminar in Literature: “Gender: Subversion and Transformation in Modernist Women Writers, Virginia Woolf and Rebecca West” (Laura May Cowan)

NV406 – 9:30-10:45 a.m. – TTh

Prerequisites: ENG 271 and 6 hours of 300 or 400 level literature courses or instructor permission

Note: ENG 490 may be taken more than once if taught by different professors about different topics

General Education Requirements: Satisfies the General Education Writing Intensive and Capstone Experience Requirements.

Satisfies the following English major requirements: British literature and 400-level literature and capstone

Course description: The course will study the careers of two leading modernist women writers, Rebecca West (1892-1983) and Virginia Woolf (1882-1941). It will be designed to give students a strong grounding in historical analysis of literature and also to help them probe the social, political, ideological, and aesthetic forces which determine the creation of and reception of literature. I have chosen Rebecca West and Virginia Woolf for their important roles in the modernist movement. Both women's fiction and journalism survey many social and cultural events of the twentieth century. Both women were active feminists who wrote about and participated in the struggle for women's suffrage and women's rights.

Their works have elicited controversy from readers, scholars, and politicians. The controversy that they have created will be part of our subject. The emphasis will be on literary works written before World War II, but we will use later literary essays and political journalism to contextualize these works. We may also look at dramatic and film versions of their works.

Texts may include:

By Rebecca West
- The Return of the Soldier
- The Judge
- A Letter to a Grandfather
- Harriet Hume
- Black Lamb and Grey Falcon
- A Strange Necessity
- The Young Rebecca, ed. Jane Marcus
- Woman as Artist and Thinker

By Virginia Woolf
- Jacob's Room
- Orlando
- To the Lighthouse
- Mrs Dalloway
- Moments of Being
- A Room of One's Own

(Also being offered as ENG 416)

Course description: Theoretical and practical approaches to technical editing and information design will be covered through topics such as visual rhetoric, visual literacy, cognitive psychology, color theory, visual ethics, and information graphic design. Hands-on work will include learning traditional proofreading marks, online editing techniques, document layout and design principles, and the application of style manuals to specific writing tasks. Projects will include creating a document for a client, practice in developmental editing, and practice in line editing.

ENG 542:0001 (87979): Studies in Multicultural American Literature: Narratives of Colonization and Decolonization (Margaret Lukens)

NV406 – 6:00 to 8:50 p.m. – T

Prerequisites: Graduate standing in English or permission of instructor.

Course description: The literatures of colonization began in the fifteenth century, disseminated in multiple languages across Europe, as Europeans spread their religious and economic projects across the globe. This semester’s iteration of ENG 542 will be a chance to read documents authorizing colonization as well as its critique in the context (mostly) of the Americas. We will consider stories and outcomes of colonization in the light of both Euroamerican and indigenous perspectives and experience, try on ideas about “decolonization,” and discover what that might mean in the context of the academy and the nation.
