Catalog description: This course provides intense practice with habits of reading, writing, thinking, and revising essential to postsecondary academic work. Designed for students who want to create a strong foundation for themselves in academic reading and writing. Available only during fall semester. Students who complete ENG 100 move on to ENG 106 during the spring semester. Students will not earn credit or grades for completing both ENG 101 and either course in the College Composition Stretch Sequence, ENG 100 and ENG 106.

Students must complete both ENG 100 and ENG 106 with a minimum grade of C or better in each course to satisfy the General Education College Composition requirement. Neither course taken alone will satisfy this requirement.

ENG 101: College Composition

Prerequisites: none

Satisfies the following general education and English major requirement(s): ENG 101 is mandatory for all students.

Catalog description: Students practice the ways in which writing serves to expand, clarify, and order experience and knowledge, with particular attention to persuasive writing. Satisfactory completion of the course depends upon quality of weekly writing assignments as well as demonstration of proficiency in college-level writing.

*The Translingual Sections of ENG 101: Half the seats are reserved for multilingual students; half are reserved for other students who have a personal or professional interest in language difference (journalism, international business or engineering, social work, education, etc.). The logic of the section is twofold: first, we assume that putatively monolingual native speakers of English and multilingual speakers of English have much to learn from each other; second, the rapidly globalizing workplace needs people who can negotiate productively across multiple languages.

Please confirm that your students are specifically interested in enrolling in the Translingual Section due to the explanations above; please have them submit a brief description of their interests to our Writing Center Director Paige Mitchell via email: paige.mitchell@maine.edu

This section is located in Belfast at the Hutchinson Center – FHC.

The Writing Center (Umaine.edu/wcenter) provides one-on-one peer consultations in writing, reading, and public speaking. We support document design projects (websites, online portfolios, PowerPoint presentations, Linkedin accounts), grants, proposals, resumes and research projects.

This is a free service for Umaine undergraduates, graduates, staff, faculty, and community members. We tutor in person in 402 Neville Hall, campus satellite locations, and online. Please see our website or contact the Writing Center Director, Paige Mitchell, for more information and follow our events on social media:

* 5 seats in all “live” sections reserved for English majors & minors, and creative-writing minors

Catalog Description: Offers students experience in writing in three major forms: autobiographical narrative, fiction, and poetry.

ENG 206:0001 (42936): Descriptive and Narrative Writing (Carla Billitteri)

NV406 – 12:30 p.m. - TTh

Prerequisites: ENG 101 or equivalent.

Satisfies the general education Artistic & Creative Expression and Writing Intensive requirements.

Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): May count towards the creative writing concentration; please refer to the English major checklist and consult with your advisor.

Course description: This course in descriptive and narrative writing will help students learn how to effectively capture personal experience in narrative form. Using memoirs, as well as short stories, drama, journalism, and critical theory, students will closely analyze characters, motivation, conflict, setting, and dialogue. Students will examine the ways in which writers craft their narratives to depict their personal ‘truth’ while creating appeal and suspense for their reading audience. Weekly classes will focus on discussing the texts we read as well as having students compose personal narrative works of their own. Special emphasis on the informal, autobiographical essay.

Section 0001 course description: “Medieval Monsters and Marvels”

Strange things happen on the longest day of summer and the shortest day of winter in medieval European literature. Portals to other realms open up, lovers fall in and out of love, strange fairy women appear to choose a mate or a victim, and magic boats materialize at the shore, waiting to take an adventurous hero away on a voyage he’ll never forget—and from which he may never return. The fall and spring liminal phases also provide moments when the magical realm encroaches on the human, and nature envelops civilization. This class aims to introduce you to some medieval literature with seasonal subject matter. It should give you a basic understanding of medieval culture, as it covers a broad range of national literatures and time periods. We will examine some of the texts which describe the otherworldly effects of these weirdest of nights. Texts will include Celtic, Norse French, and Spanish romance, including works by Chrétien de Troyes and Marie de France, Sir Gawain and The Green Knight, and ballads, fairy and folk tales. You will come away with an appreciation for cultural comparison and analysis, as well as a deeper understanding of the way our environment shapes our culture. This subject has relevance outside the field of Medieval Studies; you will be encouraged to make connections between these old celebrations and ones that still continue to this day.

Section 0990 course description: “Apocalyptic Literature”

This is the way the world ends / This is the way the world ends / This is the way the world ends / Not with a bang but a whimper. (T. S. Eliot)

“Apocalypse.” “Armageddon.” “Doomsday.” Whatever the name and whatever the form it takes, the end of the world (and what comes after) is a subject that has been explored by religions both ancient and modern, and in numerous works of fiction from the 1800s right up through the present day.
This course will look at a broad selection of works in this genre (both novels and films) to help us examine the various ways the world might end, from natural/biological disaster, to nuclear holocaust, all the way up to the most modern entry in the genre—the zombie apocalypse. Just as important, we will look at how these texts explore the ways in which we, as a species, might respond to those ends. Throughout the course we will pay particular attention to how the various forms of apocalypse (and the responses to it “post” apocalypse) might reflect aspects of the time periods in which those works were written.

The reading list is still to be determined but in the past has included works by such authors as Pat Frank, George Stewart, Walter M. Miller, Jr., Margaret Atwood and Cormac McCarthy.

Section 0991 course description: “Home Not So Sweet Home” This section will examine a variety of texts that draw psychological and metaphoric connections between the persona and consciousness of the main character and the house s/he inhabits.

Texts:
- Alias Grace Margaret Atwood
- House of Sand and Fog Andre Dubus
- A Room of One’s Own Virginia Woolf
- Sacred Country Rose Tremain
- House on Mango Street Sandra Cisneros

ENG 256:0001 (44178): British Women’s Literature (Elizabeth Neiman)
S375 – 3:30-4:45pm - TTh
Prerequisites: 3 hours of English
General Education Requirements: Satisfies the General Education Western Cultural Tradition, and Cultural Diversity and International Perspectives Requirements. Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): none

Course description: English 256 introduces students to an exciting range of work by British women writers across the past two centuries. While our focus is primarily prose, and with particular emphasis on the novel, we will work across genres and time periods so to consider correlations across time and writers. Over the course of our study, we will raise questions about the traditional literary canon, so to appreciate—but also to potentially question—the selection process, or how we (as the greater field of literary studies, but also more individually, as connoisseurs) judge what is ‘literary’ and by what standards, and what in turn has been judged as lesser than literature, and why. By so doing, we will explore questions such as:

- how, why, and when writers select specific conventions or genres to explore issues that matter to them;
- how, when, and with implications writers judge and evaluate their work by ‘aesthetic’ measures;
- and how and when writers might see their work as an opportunity to envision the world anew.

I aim to be as inclusive as possible in my selection of texts and writers, so to provide students with an intersectional approach to women’s British literature.

ENG 271:0001 (45215): The Act of Interpretation (Steven Evans)
NV206 – 11:00 - 11:50 a.m. – MWF
Prerequisite: ENG 170
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Western Cultural Tradition and Writing Intensive Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): ENG 271 is a core course
Note: Some spaces are reserved for English majors and minors.

Course description: The catalog description of this course reads simply: “An introduction to critical theory. Study of individual critics or schools of literary theory. Application of these interpretative strategies to literary texts.”

In this particular section of the class, we will read, discuss, and write about a variety of consequential texts from the history of literary semiotics, hermeneutics, poetics, and cultural studies, starting with Plato and Aristotle and extending to our own day. The central questions we will explore are: What is representation? What is language? What makes an interpretation valid? Who is authorized to speak? What is ideology and how does it work to confer identity on subjects? In the process of forming provisional answers to these fundamental questions, students will advance their ability to offer artful and persuasive interpretations of a wide range of texts.

Students with an interest in literary theory may follow up their work in 170 and 271 in English 371: Readings in Literary Theory and Criticism and in other 300- and 400-level classes.

Required texts:
- Marcel Proust, trans. Lydia Davis | Swann’s Way | Penguin 2004 | 978- 0142437964

These books are available at the UMaine Bookstore, on reserve at the Fogler Library, and in the Wicks Reading Room adjacent to the English Department in Neville 304.

ENG 341:0001 (45997) Colonial and Early National American Literature (Benjamin Friedlander)
SN235– 8:00-9:15am - TTh
Prerequisites: 6 credits beyond ENG 101 (ENG 170 and ENG 222 recommended) or instructor permission
General Education Requirements: Western Cultural Tradition and Cultural Diversity or International Perspectives
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): Pre-1800 and 300 level literature course

Catalog description: The literatures of colonial America began almost immediately after contact between Europeans and Native Americans in the fifteenth century, disseminated in multiple languages across Europe. These earliest writings were advertisements for empire: tales of adventure, catalogues of wonders, justifications and warnings. By the seventeenth century, new immigrants and American-born settlers were creating a local literature for local consumption, including the great devotional works of the New England Puritans and the first examples of that long-lived American genre, the captivity narrative. This colonial period culminated in the eighteenth century’s American Enlightenment, which gave rise to the Revolution, and was soon followed by the first stirrings of literary nationalism in the early republic. Encompassing three hundred years of history and an international range of authors, this introductory course may include works translated into English and taking such representative forms as the memoir, travel narrative, sermon, and political tract, as well as the more expected literary genres of poetry, fiction, and drama. A reading-intensive course, it is designed to teach students about a crucial epoch in world history and American literature while creating an opportunity for students to practice reading and research skills in order to better prepare them for work in advances seminars.
ENG 361:0001 (46002) Modernism (Laura Cowan May)
SL311 – 9:00-9:50am - MWF
Prerequisite: 6 credits beyond ENG 101 (ENG 170 and ENG 222 recommended) or instructor permission
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Western Cultural Tradition
Satisfies the following English Major requirement(s): 300 level literature course

Catalog description: An introduction to modernism, the revolution in literature and culture that took place during the end of the nineteenth century and the first half of the twentieth century. Because modernism was an international movement expressed in multiple genres, this introductory course may include writers and artists from around the world working in poetry, prose, drama, and film. This reading-intensive course is designed to teach students about a crucial period in literary history while giving them the opportunity to practice their reading and research skills in order to better prepare them for work in advanced seminars.

ENG 381:0001 (46003) Themes in Literature -“Beyond the Round Table: Arthurian Literature“ (Sarah Harlan-Haughey)
J102 – 3:30 – 4:45pm – TTh
Prerequisites: 6 credits beyond ENG 101 (ENG 170 and ENG 222 recommended) or instructor permission
Satisfies the following general education requirement(s): Western Cultural Tradition
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): Pre-1800, British literature and 300 level literature course

Course description: The romances and adventures of King Arthur and his knights and ladies of the Round Table are ever popular, with their heady promise of magic, sex, nostalgia, and violence. The story of Arthur, one of the great world myths original to the British Isles, has entertained and fascinated people for at least a millennium. This class offers an in-depth study of the evolution of what is now a British icon through a series of formal and informal writing assignments and lively class discussion. We will read the earliest Celtic Arthurian legends, then move on to the great medieval Arthurian romances and the final flowering of Arthuriana in the Middle Ages. We will then turn to 19th-century nostalgia for the past with the Arthurian Revival. Throughout the course we will trace the modern evolution of the Arthurian myth in 20th- and 21st-century film adaptations.

SN119 – 12:30-1:45p – TTh
Prerequisites: 6 credits beyond ENG 101 (ENG 170 and ENG 222 recommended) or instructor permission
General Education Requirements: Western Cultural Tradition
Satisfies the following English major requirement(s): 300 level literature course

Catalog description: The human relation to the natural environment has always been a central theme in visions of alternative worlds. These issues have come ever more to the fore in the face of the environmental degradation wrought by industrial and post-industrial civilization. After brief stops at the Garden of Eden and Thomas More’s Utopia, we’ll establish a baseline by looking at the role of nature in 19th and early 20th century works with an anti-industrial stance (Thoreau, Morris, Zamyatin). Bracing ourselves for a descent into despair, we’ll then consider recent dystopias featuring environmental apocalypse (McCarthy, Boyle, Atwood). The course will end on a more hopeful note with utopian works imagining a more sustainable, or at least survivable, future for human beings and the planet (Callenbach, Robinson, Le Guin).

Proposed Texts (subject to change):
Margaret Atwood, The Year of the Flood
T. Coraghessan Boyle, A Friend of the Earth
Ernst Callenbach, Ecotopia
Ursula K. Le Guin, Always Coming Home or The Dispossessed
Cormac McCarthy, The Road
Selections from Thomas More, Utopia
William Morris, News from Nowhere
Kim Stanley Robinson, Pacific Edge
Thoreau, selections from Walden: Or, Life in the Woods
Evgeny Zamyatin, We

ENG 440:0001 (43659): American Seminar (Margaret Lukens)
NV406 – 9:30-10:45am – TTh

Prerequisites: ENG 271 plus 6 hours of 300-level literature courses or instructor permission

General Education Requirements: Ethics and Writing Intensive

Satisfies the following English major requirements: Capstone option; 400-level literature

Course description: In fall 2020 I will teach the American Seminar as a selection of late 19th-century to early 21st-century literature depicting life in the USA after the abolition of slavery. What happens when (through legislation and war) a nation ends a practice it has relied on for nearly 400 years? Can such wounds be healed? Does healing require memory or amnesia, reparations, compromise, or forgiveness? I have chosen these works for their evocation of American experience and pleasurable reading; all will bring us to an analysis of structural racism, whether through fiction, drama, poetry, or memoir. You will be reading deeply, discovering research topics of personal interest, and pursuing a sustained investigation through writing.

Proposed texts:
- The Water Dancer, Ta-Nehisi Coates
- The White Card, Claudia Rankine
- Blues For Mister Charlie (or If Beale Street Could Talk), James Baldwin

ENG 470:0001 (43787) Topics in Literary Theory and Criticism: “In a future key: modern and contemporary critical thought” (Carla Billitteri)
NV406 – 11:00am -12:15pm – TTh

Prerequisites: ENG 271 plus 6 hours of 300-level literature courses or instructor permission

General Education Requirements: Writing Intensive

Satisfies the following English major requirements: Capstone option; 400-level literature

Course description: This seminar will look at the common grounds of modern and contemporary critical thought in the humanities as well as in the sciences and the social sciences. This is a ground of questioning what it means to be a human subject in a time of grave geo-political transformation and a ground of re-envisioning the future of humanity on a local as well as a global scale. As the postcolonial theorist Sylvia Wynter has written, there is only one task for the arts as well as for critical thinking, and that task is the work of redefining “what it means to be human.”

Two thematic keys are combined throughout the semester: the key of the present (thinking about the present and understanding the factual and ideological legacies that have shaped our present) and the key of the future (thinking about the future and re-envisioning the meaning and the meaning-foundations of our sense of humanity on a local as well as a global scale). These thematic keys are finely interlaced. It is only fair to say that we will dwell in complexities.

Readings: We will read the works of several critical theorists, artists and writers active in the interconnected fields of postcolonial theory, critical race studies, and gender studies. If time allows it, we will also look at the field of environmental studies, for this is a pressing concern in contemporary thought.

Our readings will be distributed across the arc of one-hundred years (from the early twentieth-century to the early twenty-first century) and include the works of W. E. B. Du Bois, Frantz Fanon, Sylvia Wynter,

The works of these authors are often hybrid in genre and share dynamic fusion of disciplinary discourses and a far-reaching critical look into the cultural parameters and the historical and socio-political circumstances that regulate and determine the experience of being a human subject in the world. Specific texts will be designated in the near future. Please contact Dr. Billitteri (carlab@maine.edu) for further clarifications.

Requirements: Attendance and active participation. Weekly annotations to be posted online each Monday by 5:00 pm; a research prospectus with an annotated bibliography (six to ten entries) and a final project (ten to twelve to pages). Note that each written assignment leads to and prepares the grounds for successive assignments.

ENG 496:0001 (44581): Field Experience in Professional Writing (Kathryn Swacha)
